An Evening With the Spirits.

WHAT A LADY TRANCE MEDIUM HAS TO SAY—THE STORY OF A HAUNTED HOUSE—THINGS STRANGE AND CURIOUS.

From the Philadelphia Press.

A very large and respectable audience was present last evening at Washington Hall to hear Miss Nettie Pease, a trance medium, on "The haunted house, or the experience of a medium."

HISTORY OF THE LECTURESS

Miss Pease stated that she was born in Cincinnati her father was a physician, and a member of the Baptist Church there, both her parents were strictly church-going people, and she was taught that it was utterly impossible for ghosts or spirits to make manifestations or to return to earth. She was taught to look upon all such things with contempt. With this kind of education she became perfectly fearless. About this time her father conceived the idea of leaving the city and going to reside in the country. He soon put this idea in practical shape and opened a therapeutic establishment in a few miles from the city. He here remained until shortly leaving Miss Pease in the city where she was attending school. The young lady was to go home every Friday evening and return to her school on Sunday evening. Miss Pease said she will remembered the day chill that ran through her frame when she first entered that great gloomy house. She did not know how to account for the cause of this but she did now.

The building was barely finished at the time her father purchased it. It stood alone upon a wide lawn, some half mile from the village of Carthage. There had been an old building upon the ground, which had been moved close to the new structure.

HER FIRST EXPERIENCE

The first Friday evening after the lady returned from school she was replaced with this part of the building, but could not tell why. Her mother told her that the servant girls had heard some strange noises in one of the rooms of the building, and had become very much frightened. Miss Pease was curious to investigate this, and asked her to remain in the room, being desirous of showing the girls that there was no truth in the existence of spirits.

The door of the room had no lock upon it, and the girls said it was impossible to keep it so, so she would open it and walking into the room Miss Pease placed a heavy armchair against the door, and lighted a large number of candles, and retired, confident that no body would enter the room, there being no one in the house but her and family.

About midnight she put out her light and retired. Pretty soon there was a rap upon the headboard. She thought the girls were trying to frighten her. The raps were repeated, growing louder and faster, as she stepped to her door and put her ear to the door.

THE ROOMS EXAMINED

She arose and lighted the lamp and examined the door. One of the girls who did not retire with the rest, had not slept. Notwithstanding the evening, and left the lamp burning in her room. She had hardly done this when the voices recommenced. She again lit the lamp and with the servant girl. She then examined the room, lamp in hand, and searching every nook and corner, but could not find the cause of the noises. She then retired, but the raps were so loud that they awoke the whole household.

SCENES IN THE ROOM

The lady then narrated some of the terrible scenes and noises that she had heard in that room. All the servants her father secured refused to remain in it after a single night's experience. Strangers would come a great distance to sleep in the room, but one night's experience satisfied them also. Her father had never left a trap, but he mother had witnessed some wonderful manifestations.

One night when Miss Pease came from school she said: "I cannot go to that room to-night, it will kill me." Her mother said to her: "Nettie go to the room if you hear any noise, call to me." One of the girls the one she had spoken of as being afraid, had remained in the house and with this girl she started for the room. When they reached the top of the stairs the door opened, just as if some person inside had stood there to open it. She went down and told her mother that they were up stairs waiting for them. Her mother went up stairs and opened the door, on identifying frightened. No sooner had she gone than a large chair made a tremendous jump towards her. Her mother instantly ran down stairs badly frightened.

Her father now went up stairs, and as he stood outside there were great noises inside. The noises she said was terrible. Her father now went down stairs. On the side of the steps there was a door opening into a porch. The family never kept any watch dog, but as he reached this door some large animal made a tremendous leap against it. Her father now determined to investigate the matter.

THE MYSTERY UNVEILED

The family hearing through a friend that there was a medium in Cincinnati who could explain the matter, he was sent for. This medium was not made acquainted with the case, and his story was therefore to be believed. A circle was made and the spirit wrote upon the table the name of George Young. Twenty Years ago he said he was traveling with his sister through the State of Ohio. He had stopped at this house, had been taken to this room. That during the night he and his sister had been murdered, and their bodies had been burned in the fireplace of the room. He gave the name of the man who had committed this terrible deed. He told Miss Pease's father to go to Cincinnati, where he would find a little tavern, the keeper of which said the spirit had murdered him, and his sister more than twenty years ago. But Mrs. Pease's father was to do nothing to him. He could prove nothing. The spirit said he could not rest until the manner of his death was made known. After this the noises ceased.

After this Miss Pease said her father and mother said that there was nothing in the room for at one time she believed as that time. She read the Bible a great deal and room reading it she grew skeptical. At last some of the family got hold of some of Mr. Davis's works.

A CIRCLE FORMED

By such other parents went to Cincinnati, and there they went to see a medium. This medium told them that they had a daughter who was a natural medium. He told them what he medium powers would be. He wanted her parents to have a circle and such and such spirits had promised to attend. At the time her father visited the medium they had no idea of such a thing as spirits returning to the earth. They formed a circle for investigation. At first the raps were very feeble, afterwards growing louder and louder. There was no one in the house except the family, and they were in that little room. By-and-by the raps on the walls extended all over the room, and could be heard through the entire house. Miss Pease could not believe that they were caused by spirits, but attributed them to electricity or magnetism.

The spirits now said that if they would call over the alphabet they would commune with the family. They told them to continue their circles. They now talked with the family, and would play upon instruments some of the most beautiful music Miss Pease said she ever heard.

THE SPIRITS SHAKE HANDS

Miss Pease said she told the spirits that if they could write and play upon musical instruments they could also shake hands. The lady said she should never forget the touch of the cold hand which pressed hers. The spirits never touched the hands of her father, he was very positive. She asked the spirits why they did not touch him. Suddenly one evening he made a start as if frightened. She asked him what was the matter. He replied that some one had touched him.

"LILLY"

Miss Pease gave a graphic description of the first spirit she ever saw, which was a beautiful little child named Lilly. This little child made the following communication to her:

"My name is Lilly. I live in this place. I died here. Lilly got sick, her mother went for the doctor, he gave her candy medicine and little Lilly died, her mother put a yellow rose upon her grave, but thought it was a white one."

"Of course," said Miss Pease "we know nothing of these facts." Miss Pease asked Lilly should she bring her mother to the circles. She said no, but bring her aunt Liza, who would believe her. This lady came, and said it was her little niece. Miss Pease's family then visited the grave of little Lilly, and found a yellow rose was blooming over it. Miss Pease said she could narrate instances like these enough to fill a volume.

In conclusion, she spoke of the progress in spiritualism, how she rose to be a trance-medium, during which she utters poems. She said she had reached the fourth plane of the spiritual heaven.

The lady is good looking, but rather pale and spiritual. Her eyes are large, and in the subdued light of the hall we took them to be black. Her hair is of the same color, cut close.

Things to Remember.

Edward Everett became overheated in testifying in a Court room went to Faneuil Hall where it was cold, sat in a draught of air until his turn came to speak. But my hands and feet were ice, my lungs on fire. In this condition I had to go and spend three hours in the court room. He died in less than a week from thus checking the perspiration. It was enough to kill any man.

Professor Mitchell, while in a state of perspiration in yellow fever, the certain sign of recovery, left his bed, went into another room, became chilled in a moment and died the same night.

If while perspiring, or while warmer than usual from exercise, or a heated room there is a sudden exposure from still cold air to a raw damp atmosphere, or a draught, whether it be open window or door or street corner, the inevitable result is a violent and instantaneous closing of the pores of the skin, by which waste and impure matter, which was making its way out of the system is compelled to seek an exit through some weaker part. The idea is presented by saying that the cold had settled in that part. To illustrate: A lady was about getting into a small boat to cross the Delaware, but wishing first to get an orange, at a fruit stand, she ran up the bank of the river and on her return to the boat found herself much heated, for it was summer, but there was a little wind on the water, and her clothes soon felt cold which settled in her lungs, and within the year she died of consumption.

A strong man was working in his garden in May, feeling rather tired about noon he sat down in the shade of the house and fell asleep. He awoke up chilly, inflammation of the lungs followed, ending after two years of great suffering in consumption. On opening his chest there was such an extensive decay that the yellow matter was scooped out by the cupful.

A Boston shipowner while on the deck of one of his vessels thought he would lend a hand in some emergency, and pulling off his coat worked with a will until he perspired freely, when he sat down to rest awhile, enjoying the delicious breeze from the sea. On attempting to rise he found himself unable and was so stiff in his joints that he had to be carried home and put to bed, which he did not leave until the end of two months, when he was barely able to hobble down to the wharf on crutches.

A lady after being unusually busy all day found herself heated and tired towards sundown of a summer's day. She concluded to take a drive to town in an open vehicle. The ride made her uncomfortably cool, but she warmed herself up by an hour's shopping, when she turned homeward it being late in the evening, she found herself more decidedly chilly than before. At midnight she had pneumonia inflammation of the lungs, and in three months had the ordinary symptoms of confirmed consumption.

A lady of great energy of character lost her cook, and had to take her place for four days, the kitchen was warm and there was a draught of air through it. When the work was done she, warm and weary, went to her chamber and lay down on the bed to rest. This act was repeated several times. On the fifth day she had an attack of lung fever, at the end of six months she was barely able to leave her chamber only to hand herself suffering with all the prominent symptoms of confirmed consumption, such as quick pulse, night and morning cough, night sweats, debility, shortness of breath, and falling away.

A young lady rose from her bed on a November night, and leaned her arm on the cold window sill to listen to a serenade. Next morning she had pneumonia, and suffered the horrors of asthma for the remainder of a long life.

Multitudes of women lose health every year in one or more ways, by busying themselves in a warm kitchen until weary, and then throwing themselves on a bed or sofa, without covering, and perhaps in a room without fire, or by removing the outer clothing, or perhaps changing the dress for a common one as soon as they enter the house after a walk or shopping. The rule should be invariably to go at once into a warm room and keep on all the clothing for at least five or ten minutes, until the forehead is perfectly dry. In all weathers, if you have to walk and ride on any occasion, do the riding first.

Terrible Naptha Explosion

The New York Times of Saturday, says: On Thursday evening the North German brig Der Heiss, Captain Yuhle Ehrenreich, with a cargo consisting of 1,581 barrels of naptha, destined for Bulbos, Spain, anchored off Tompkinsville, S. I., awaiting favorable weather to proceed to sea. The Captain yesterday morning, at about seven o'clock, lighted a blazing fire in the stove in the cabin, but had an opportunity of enjoying its cheerful effects but a moment, as in an instant there was a terrible explosion that shattered the brig almost to atoms. The Captain was blown through the cabin into the air almost twenty-five feet, landing in the waters of the bay. The mate and cabin boy were hurled with lightning velocity over the railing of the vessels into the water and all would have perished but for the fortunate appearance of the pilot boat W. H. Webb. The Captain was the first picked up, more dead than alive, his head and face presenting an awful spectacle. The mate and the boy Marx were afterwards rescued by the crew of the same boat who, at the risk of their lives, and of the safety of their craft, approached the now flame enveloped brig, and took off the remainder of the crew, who were clinging to the bowsprit. The shock of the explosion was distinctly felt at the villages of Tompkinsville and Stapleton and the news of the disaster spreading like wildfire, the wharves and piers were crowded with thousands of spectators, who did all in their power to assist the crew of the ill-fated brig. Every effort that could be made to extinguish the fire was made in vain. There were constant explosions of the tanks of naptha, rendering it extremely dangerous to approach the brig.

The disaster may be attributed to the loose manner of packing away the naptha in the hold of the vessel. The Legislature and the Common Council of New York have passed laws to punish severely parties who store nitro-glycerine within the city limits; but they have doubtless over-looked another mighty agent of destruction—naptha—which is a common article of merchandise and laboratories for its manufacture throughout the Metropolis.

Of the 1,500 and odd casks of this liquid stowed away in the hold of this vessel, fully one-third, it is said, were in a leaking condition, and the vapor was pent up between the decks. The cabin of the Captain, which was situated near the middle of the brig, and immediately over a portion of the casks, served as an air-hole of escape for the vapor, and as soon as the fire was ignited in the stove the whole mass exploded. The major portion of the crew were attending to their various avocations in the forward part of the brig, and the first intimation they had of the disaster was the report of the explosion and the rising of the masts and the greater portion of the deck into the air.

The Captain was taken to the Smith Infirmary, Tompkinsville, where his injuries were dressed by Dr. Anderson. He now lies in a critical condition, and it is possible that he will not survive his wounds. The mate and the injured lad were conveyed to the Sailors Retreat, and are in a fair way of recovery. The vessel and cargo are entirely consumed, but are fully insured in home and foreign companies.

All Sorts.

An interesting trial will take place at Bennington Vt. December 8 involving the investigation of the robbery of the First National Bank of that place some years since. Enos Adams deposited $4 400 in bonds as collateral security for money loaned from the bank. After the robbery Mr. Adams was called upon to pay his note which he did and sued the corporation for his bonds, which were stolen.

The editor of the Danbury Ct. Times is going into the interviewing business, and evidently for some purpose. He gives notice of it. We shall interview a number of our citizens this week on the subject of finance.

It is said the pecuniary affairs of the Belknap Mills at Laconia, though the notes were allowed to go to protest, are in a very favorable condition as the assets are upwards of half a million and the indebtedness some two hundred thousand dollars.

A quarrelsome fellow in Ellsworth Me. convicted for the second time as a common seller was sentenced to pay a fine of two hundred dollars and three months imprisonment, with the additional penalty that if he did not pay the fine he was to get four months more in jail.

The Message.

The information presented to Congress on the state of national affairs by President Grant in his late message, and the recommendations therein embodied, will occupy the consideration of the body, and excite general discussion for [illegible] views announced in that paper on finance, reconstruction and foreign relations, in especial, are of primary interest and importance. They create no surprise, and they command the assent of the mass of the people, for they are clear, sensible, practical, according with the traditions of the Government, the settled sense of public justice, and the well understood principles of the Republican party. We see no possible ground for any antagonism between the Executive and Congress, so far as can be judged from present developments of the political situation.

The Oil Market.

In Pittsburgh the market was much weaker yesterday afternoon, and seller's and buyer's options for this month sold at 16c, a decline of one-half cent from the quotations of yesterday. Sales of 8,000 barrels were reported at the price named. As this market is the one in which a most determined effort was to be made to "corner" the "shorts" on Crude for this month's delivery, the decline is significant.

On the creek the demand was slight at and south of Petroleum Centre and prices receded five to ten cents, sales having been made at $5.55 1-2 and $5.55. At Miller and Titusville there were sellers during the early part of the day, at $5.40, but toward the close of business $5.40 was offered by New York and Boston buyers.

Treasurer Spinner's Report.

General Spinner, the Treasurer of the United States, has finished his annual report and has submitted it to Secretary Boutwell. It is a curious and remarkable document, covering 180 pages of manuscript, every word and figure in his own penmanship, and the whole handsomely bound. It is largely made up in tabular statements, and its recommendations are comparatively few. He puts in a good plea for the increase of salary to women clerks, and speaks feelingly of the uniform courtesy shown to him during his extended term of service. The most important recommendation relates to national banks. Under the existing laws taxes on their capital, their dividends, etc., are collected by the Internal Revenue Bureau and they are required to make out twelve different reports only one of which goes to the Treasurer. He advises that hereafter their taxes be collected semi-annually by the Treasurer, and says it can be done without expense to the government, as it will only be necessary to withhold the amount from the interest on their bonds deposited. He speaks of his long and arduous service, his advancing age and infirmities, and after saying he has done no act to be ashamed of before the world, closes in the following words:

"I feel that such good fortune cannot last always; the barque of the most fortunate skillful man may at last be wrecked on some unknown rock. This law is now strongly against me and I therefore more than ever feel an anxious desire to retire from the place I hold, which I am sure has been of greater benefit to the people of the United States than to your humble servant."

MR. BEECHER has got into water of an exceedingly warm temperature by marrying Richardson to Mrs. McFarland. The act was a very ill-judged one, because it assumed that the divorce was legal, and the separation was unattended with criminality on the part of Richardson. Mr. Beecher has brought scandal upon religion, and struck a most foul blow at the marriage institution, by officiating on such an occasion. But it was an error into which he was doubtless led by legal counsel, who wished to secure Richardson's estate to Mrs. McFarland; and then again, the good-hearted divine was partially blinded by his friendship for the victim and a tender pity and sympathy that failed to discriminate between error and crime. It seems almost impossible to condemn the faults of those we love, faults which are redeemed by brilliancy of intellect and achievement, amiability of disposition, and kindred endearing qualities. But if we allow our feelings to swerve us in the calm and severe exercise of a moral judgment on human actions, we come to conclusions which neither reason or conscience can justify nor accord with.

THE following is a portion of President Grant's Message, in regard to pension and other matters, that failed to reach us yesterday:

During the last fiscal year 23,196 names were added to the pension rolls, 4,876 dropped therefrom, leaving at its close 187,063. The amount paid to pensioners including the compensation of disbursing agents was $28,422,884, an increase of $4,411,902 on that of the previous year. The munificence of Congress has been conspicuously manifest in its legislation for the soldiers and sailors who suffered in the recent struggle to maintain that unity of government which makes us one people. The addition to the pension rolls of each successive year since the conclusion of hostilities result, in a gross degree, from the repeated amendments of the act of the 14th of July, 1862, which extended its provisions to cases not falling within its original scope. The large outlay which is thus occasioned is further increased by the more liberal allowance bestowed since that date upon those who, in the line of duty, where wholly or permanently disabled.

Public opinion has given an emphatic sanction to these measures of Congress, and it will be conceded that no part of our public burden is more cheerfully borne than that which is imposed by this branch of the service.

It necessitates for the next fiscal year, in addition to the amount justly chargeable to the naval pension fund, an appropriation of thirty million dollars during the year ending the 30th day of September, 1870.

The Patent Office issued 13,762 patents, and its receipts were $686,389, being $213,926 more than the expenditures.

I would respectfully call your attention to the recommendation of the Secretary of the Interior for uniting the duties of supervising the education of freedmen with the other duties devolving upon the Commissioner of Education.

It is the desire of Congress to make the census, which must be taken during the year 1870, more complete and perfect than heretofore, I suggest early action upon any plan that may be agreed upon, as Congress, at the last session, appointed a committee to take into consideration such measures as might be deemed proper in reference to the census, and to report a plan.

I recommend to your favorable consideration the claims of the Agricultural Bureau for liberal appropriations in a country so diversified in soil and climate as ours, and with a population so largely dependent upon agriculture. The benefits that can be conferred by properly fostering this bureau are incalculable.

I desire respectfully to call the attention of Congress to the inadequate salaries of a number of the most important officers of the government.

In this message I will not enumerate them, but will specify only the Justices of the Supreme Court. No change has been made in their salaries for fifteen years. Within that time the labors of the Court have largely increased, and the expenses of living have at least doubled. During the same time Congress has twice found it necessary to increase largely the compensation of its own members, and the duty which devolves on another department of the government deserves and will undoubtedly receive its due consideration.

Grant's Message in England.

LONDON, Dec. 7.

The message of the President of the United States was transmitted by Atlantic Telegraph last night and is published this morning.

The Pall Mall Gazette, in its comments on President Grant's reference to the Alabama Claims, says: The Americans are ready to accept an apology in lieu of all damages they demand, but England can't do more than she has already done. Time will amend American sensitiveness. Such events as the demonstration in honor of Mr. Peabody will tend to mitigate the irritation.

The Gazette concludes by saying that the message on the whole is friendly, and thinks the President's suggestions, that new negotiations be entered on to prevent similar troubles, will be approved in England.

Forty-first Congress---Second Session.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 7.

The following bills were introduced and laid on the table preparatory to reference:

By Mr. Spencer, to amend the act of April 9th, 1866, to protect all persons in the United States in their civil rights and to furnish means of their vindication. It provides that, Said act should be so constituted to extend to all persons within the jurisdiction of any State the equal protection of its laws and make all persons of color competent to testify in the courts of the several States, as fully as if they were white persons. It also confers on United States courts jurisdiction of criminal cases in which persons are involved who belong to the class of persons denied the same rights declared in the first section of said act.

By Mr. Carpenter, to secure and protect freedom of transit within the United States.

By Mr. Corbett, to amend existing laws relating to Internal Revenue. It adds "canned and preserved fruit" to the articles exempt by law from internal tax.

By Mr. Patterson, to promote and encourage a national industrial exposition at Washington, in 1871.

The Vice President submitted a memorial from the Republican Convention of Virginia held Nov. 24 and 26, referring to the election in that State, and arguing against the admission of Senators and Representatives elect.

By Mr. Thayer, a bill amending the homestead laws by postponing the [illegible]

Mr. Sumner introduced the following bill to amend the banking act and promote a return to specie payments:

Be it enacted, &c., That so much of the banking act as limits the issue of bills to $300,000,000, is hereby repealed, and existing banks may be enlarged and new banks may be organized at the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, but no more bills than are now authorized by the banking act shall hereafter be issued unless the Secretary of the Treasury at the time of their issue can and does cancel and destroy a like amount of legal tenders, and the increase of bank bills hereby authorized shall not exceed $5,000,000 per annum, which amount shall be so distributed by the Secretary of the Treasury as to equalize as nearly as possible the banking interests of the different States.

Mr. Sumner indicated the following reasons in favor of the bill: First, it will create a demand for our national bonds, and to the extent of this demand will improve our credit. Second, It will tend to satisfy the portion of the country, especially at the South and West, where currency and banks are wanting, and thus arrest a difficult question. Third, It will not expand or contract the currency, so that the opposite parties on these questions may support it.—Fourth, Under it banks will gradually strengthen themselves and prepare to resume specie payments. Fifth, It will give the South and West the opportunity to organize banks and will interest these parts of the country to this extent in national securities and the national banking system by which both will be strengthened. Sixth, It will, without a reasonable doubt, relieve the country of the whole greenback system, and thus dispose of an important question. Seventh, It will hasten a return to specie payment.

The bill was tabled for the present.

Mr. Trumbull introduced a bill to relieve members of Congress from expatriation and preserve the independence of the different departments of the government. It provides that any member of Congress or delegate from Territories who shall directly or indirectly solicit or recommend the appointment to office by the President or heads of departments of any person in any of the executive departments, except such recommendation be in writing in response to a written request of the head of department asking it information, or by a Senator in giving his advise and consent in the manner provided by the Constitution, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be fined not exceeding $1,000 for each offense, and it shall not be lawful for the President or head of any department to appoint to office or employ in his department any person who shall be directly or indirectly recommended thereto by any member of Congress or delegate from a Territory, except in the manner now provided. The bill was laid on the table for the present and ordered printed.

Senate adjourned at 1:10.

House.

The first business in the House of Representatives this morning was the distribution of the different portions of the President's Message to the respective committees having charge of the matters of which the messages treats. The resolution was offered today by Mr. Schenck, with the consent of the Committee of Ways and Means, and some discussion ensued as to the proper committee to which certain subjects should be referred. The reference of that portion of the message relating to the Darien Canal particularly excited discussion, the Committee on Commerce, Foreign Affairs and Navigation all claiming it. The resolution proposed to leave it with the Committee on Commerce, and it was so left. The resolution offered by Mr. Schenck was then adopted.

Mr. Dawes introduced a bill to reorganize the Treasury Department and fix the power of its officers, remarking he did not consider himself committed to its provisions, but introduced it at the request of others. Referred to the Committee on appropriations.

Mr. Butler, of Mass., introduced a bill to repeal the tenure-of-office act. Referred to the Committee on Judiciary.

Mr. Hill introduced a bill abolishing the franking privilege. Referred to the Post Office Committee.

Mr. Williams introduced a bill to repeal the duties on salt, coffee, tea, writing and printing paper.

Mr. Walker introduced a bill to promote the International Industrial Exhibition, to be held in Washington in 1871.

Mr. Culloon introduced a bill to repeal section 4 of the act of March 3d, 1869, in relation to additional counties, and provide an extension of time in which bounty claims may be filed. Referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. Buckingham introduced a bill to establish a uniform system of naturalization. Referred to Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Stevenson introduced a bill to provide for relief from political disabilities. Referred to the Committee on Reconstruction.

Mr. Wood introduced a bill to prevent members of Congress from accepting or holding any place of trust under the President. Referred.

Mr. Ingersoll introduced a bill to prohibit the sale of coin on the part of the United States, and provide for the redemption of United States legal tender notes in coin, at par. Referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. Paine, Chairman of the Committee on Elections, reported back the credentials of four Alabama members, with the recommendation that they be sworn in. The oath was thereupon administered by the Speaker to Messrs. Hayes, Sherwood, Heflin and Dox.

Mr. Butler, of Tennessee, presented the credentials of two Virginia members. Referred to the Committee on Elections.

The House then proceeded, as the regular order of business, to the call of Committees for reports.

Mr. Cook, from the Committee on District of Columbia, reported a resolution of inquiry as to the sums paid for the construction and completion of the Washington aqueduct. Adopted.

Mr. Jenckes, from the Committee on Patents, reported back for extension, Richard M. Hoe's patent for printing presses, for seven years.—After considerable discussion, Messrs. Jenckes, Morrill, of Maine, and Ingersoll, opposing it, the bill was, on motion of Mr. Dunchalburg, laid on the table without division.

Mr. Butler, of Massachusetts, offered a resolution directing the Postmaster General to report what, if any, plan is practicable by which pensions due widows, orphans and soldiers may be paid through the money order system of the Post Office Department. Adopted.

The House adjourned at 2:30.

General News.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.

The storm has ceased. Four inches of snow has fallen, and much detention was caused last evening to railroads in and about the city. It is now clear and cold.

A letter received last evening from Havana gives details of the barbarities practiced on negroes suspected of being engaged in a conspiracy to burn plantations. They were shot in the presence of all the negroes of eight estates, and about a dozen were whipped with from eight hundred to a thousand lashes. Arms for the Cubans have been landed at Majera. General Jordon was marching on Gibara. A heavy column of Spanish troops have been sent to the neighborhood of Sagua.

The Herald says Grant's message is that of an honest, clear-headed man. In the reconstruction business he simply looks to the execution of the laws. His plan for funding the debt and gradual return to specie payments will meet the general approbation of the country. It is evident the message non-committal on Cuban affairs. It is a good business message.

The Times says the message is one of good sense.

The World says: This is the weakest message ever sent to Congress by an American President.

The Tribune regards the message as one of the wisest and most judicious ever transmitted to Congress, and predicts its hearty approval by the American people.

PETROLEUM MARKET.

OFFICE OF THE MORNING HERALD,
TITUSVILLE, Dec. 8, 1869—8 P. M.

The figures to which holders forced prices on the Creek yesterday were above the views of buyers generally, and hence were not sustained. At the opening this morning there was no demand of importance, and before ten o'clock the feeling had broken, and after that hour round lots were offered on the Lower Creek at $5.55, and freely at $5.40 on the Upper Creek, without finding purchasers. In the afternoon the tone was exceedingly dull on the Lower Creek, and there were sellers of 40 to 46 gravity at $5.60, and of round lots of ordinary gravity at $5.55. There were small lots, aggregating 1,500 barrels, being pressed for sale at $5.50, but for these lots there were very few buyers at above $5.40 and 5.45. The demand was exceedingly light, and was mainly confined to covering "shorts," and for Cleveland, to supply the Western trade, which is now small. On the Upper Creek the feeling was firmer toward the close, and $5.40 was offered at Miller or Titusville by both New York and Boston buyers.

An Old Maiden's Romantic Marriage Story

[illegible] of Lucky Curran, a female miser, at [illegible] on Friday, reveals the following [illegible] of an old maid.

[illegible] Ostrand, of "Lochy," as she was familiarly called, was born in Poughkeepsie in 1793. When [illegible] her majority she became [illegible] with a young Poughkeepsie lawyer, [illegible] and an ardent affection grew up between them until finally her suitor had applied to her parents for the hand of their daughter in marriage. It was refused peremptorily, though Mr. Oarley was in all respects an honorable man. This of course sadly disappointed the lovers, and they parted. Some time afterward Henrick Ostrom, a brother of "Lochy," who was considered a miser, died, it is said, [illegible] of starvation, leaving a considerable sum of money. Some of his money, $3 000, was in hands by "Lochy." After his death the [illegible] which "Lochy" and Hendrick had [illegible] was sold, and "Lochy" then began to hew her own way through the world She went out at day s work; was industrious and economical to the letter; in fact, like her brother, she was miserly.

The young and beautiful girl had grown to be a homely and morose woman, on whose face the marks of time, disappointment, and a soured life had left their mark Fifteen years ago the young lawyer, then also grown old and gray, reappeared, and then again offered his hand to "Lochy" in marriage

But she was a changed woman Her heart had become hardened to her lot in life and the proffered hand was rejected Since then she has subsisted on friends about Poughkeepsie scarcely ever eating a dinner in her own house She has been known to say that a mutton chop would last her two weeks, and one who knew her says she would subsist on ten dollars a year By continually eating at others tables she managed to save every cent she earned She purchased no clothing for a number of years, and for the last fifteen or twenty years of her life was not inside of a church It was known she had accumulated considerable property, but when asked whether she wished to do any writing, replied that she did not, and died without making a will. She leaves $35 000 This property will go to the State

Miscellaneous.

The Bangor, Oldtown and Milford (Me Railroad Company has sold its road—better known as the Veazie road—from Bangor to Milford thirteen miles in length to G K Jawett and Noah Woods, acting on behalf of the European and North American Company the sale to take effect December 1 This is one of the oldest railroads in the country, and will be discontinued as soon as the tracks can be laid from the European and North American Railroad to points accommodated by the Veazie road

In Davenport Iowa, a woman who was sent to jail last Friday for vagrancy was escorted into the jail yard and introduced to a pile of rock which was to be converted into broken stone and shown the use of a stone hammer She looked at the turnkey, and said smilingly with an awful oath, "This is what you call woman s rights, ain t it? Well I ll show you that I can break more stone than any man in this jail She went at her task with a vim and astonished the other stone-knockers with the rapidity of her execution, She finished her task before they were half through with their day s jail

Hundreds of farmers in St Clair county Ill have not yet gathered their corn crop This delay is owing in a great measure to sickness and to an unusual fall of rain which has rendered the ground too muddy for work in the fields

The Muscatine (Iowa Journal says Four indiscreet children—two boys and two girls—fourteen years of age having become enraptured with the life of a hermit and the romantic life of a forest life, took to the woods across the river recently for the purpose of digging a cave in the depths of the woodland away from the cares and sorrows of civilization The parents however, got wind of the affair before the wanderers had reached a secluded place and brought them home

In Brooks Me a man named Hill taking advantage of the large number of railroad men there, undertook to sell liquor Temperance men who believe in action prosecuted him and he is now in the Belfast jail for a fine of three hundred dollars.

Four hundred children in the Manchester (N H.) Mills have been made to comply with the law of the State which requires them to go to school a certain part of the year An evening school has been opened for the benefit of those whose labor is necessary for their own and parents support It is attended by 200 scholars.

MR F W AMES

DEAR SIR We have used the two Seneca Falls Gas Pumps nearly two weeks and must say they surely exceed our expectations One well has increased from two barrels of oil and no gas to six barrels with abundance of gas The other well was pumping five to six barrels, which hardly enough gas to keep up steam and within twenty four hours after starting the pump the well in question thirteen barrels with enough gas for two boilers

Previous to using these have been using several different kinds of pumps but within success, and we are confident that your Pump gives the strongest vacuum with the least expenditure of power of any pump made and the lowest price places it within the reach of every operator Yours respectfully
